The volume concentrates on the micro-context of the intergenerational interaction and the cognitions, language, and relationship behaviors
related to

intergenerational
communication across the life span. The volume employs the perspective

Thinking of

communication as a lifespan challenge, within which interpersonal relationships need to be negotiated in an

historical context, opens up the possibility of

drawing from

intercultural theory to enhance our understanding of the

communication refers to interactions between individuals from different age cohorts or age groups. For example,
many family interactions,
