The Last Light of the Sun is a 2004 fantasy novel by Guy Gavriel Kay. Like The Lions of Al-Rassan and The Sarantine Mosaic, it is set in a world closely modeled on medieval Europe, but with elements of myth and magic incorporated. The tone is darker than that of the previous two novels, with themes of revenge, violence, the passing of an era, clash of cultures, and love—especially between father and son—being particularly prominent.

The Sun is a weakly variable star, and its actual luminosity therefore fluctuates. The major fluctuation is the eleven-year solar cycle (sunspot cycle) that causes a quasi-periodic variation of about ±0.1%. Other variations over the last 200-300 years are thought to be much smaller than this.
